CORNY CRIMINALS

Cheeky robber

Jim Broil gets the award for the cheekiest robber. $1,000 was offered for information leading to the capture and 1.[_____] of a man robbing taxi drivers. Broil, who was responsible for the robberies, turned himself in and demanded the 2.[_____]. He received a 20-year sentence for aggravated robbery... and no compensation.

False alibi

They say that everyone, even the lowest of the low, has a sense of pride. And Pierre Paulos is no exception. Paulos was arrested in Belgium, 3.[_____] of robbing a school in Liege. However, Paulos 4.[_____] that he couldn't have done it because he was busy breaking into a jewellery store at the same time – a much more prestigious and important job. Police promptly arrested him for robbing the jeweller's.

Pole position

A drunk driver was arrested after driving with a traffic-light pole (including all the lights) lying across the car bonnet. The driver had hit the pole and simply 5.[_____] driving. When the driver was asked about the pole, he replied, "It came with the car when I bought it."

Driving offence

There's fierce competition for the world's worst driver. Candidate number one is a 75-year-old man who received 14 traffic 6.[_____] in a space of just 20 minutes. The offences included driving on the wrong side of the road (four times), four hit-and-run offences, and six accidents. Candidate number two is a 62-year-old woman who 7.[_____] her driving test 40 times before finally passing it in August 1970. By that time, she had spent over $700 on 8.[_____], and could no longer afford to buy a car.

Dumb robber

In order to avoid being detected by video 9.[_____] cameras, Marjorie and Bob Hearn put on a hat and wig before robbing a store in downtown Chicago. As a result, police were unable to identify the couple. However, after carefully reviewing video material from other parts of the 10.[_____], police noticed a similar looking couple (minus the wigs and hats) filling out an entry form for a free trip. Helpfully, the couple had filled out the form with their current address, which police took note of before arresting them both.

WITCH HUNT

She was the last witch to be executed in Europe. And now some think she should be pardoned officially. This is the story of Anna Göldi.

The Middle Ages (5th to 15th centuries) was a time of superstition, with witch-hunts all over Europe. This caused the deaths of many innocent women. 1.[_____], at the height of Europe's so-called Age of Enlightenment. The woman at the centre of this tragic tale is Anna Göldi.

The story starts in the tiny Swiss canton of Glarus. 2.[_____]. This was where Anna Göldi arrived in 1765, looking for work as a maid. Within a short time, Anna found work with Jakob Tschudi, a local magistrate and rising politician. Anna was tall and attractive, with dark hair and brown eyes, 3.[_____]. She worked there for seventeen years, and for many years, things seemed to be going well. But then, one morning one of the children found a needle in her milk. Two days later needles appeared in the bread as well. 4.[_____]. She was sacked by the Tschudis. Later, she was accused of witchcraft, tortured, and finally executed.

For many years, her story was forgotten. But just recently, 5.[_____]. And now he believes he knows what really happened. "The simple fact is that Jakob Tschudi had been having an affair with Anna Göldi. When she became pregnant with his child and she threatened to reveal the truth about the affair, he accused her of witchcraft. At the time, adultery was a crime, 6.[_____]. So, he planted the needles that led to the accusations against Anna. "This was a form of extra-judicial murder," he explained.

Anna Göldi's ordeal is documented in the Glarus archives. Shortly after Anna was told to leave, there was an order for her arrest. 7.[_____]. She was questioned day and night by the religious and political leaders of Glarus. 8.[_____], but eventually confessed to being a witch, admitting that the devil had appeared to her in the form of a black dog, and that the needles had been given to her by Satan. But once free of the torture, 9.[_____]. So, they tortured her again. And this time she stuck with her confession. Two weeks later, she was led out to the public square, where her head was cut off with a sword.

"Everyone agrees that what happened was completely wrong," said Fritz Schiesser, who represents Glarus in the Swiss parliament. "And now we need to take this last step 10.[_____]." The decision is still pending.

- A She was captured a few days later
- B she withdrew her confession
- C But the last execution for witchcraft took place little more than 200 years ago
- D and Tshudi stood to lose everything if he was found out
- E and give her an official pardon
- F Suspicion fell upon Anna
- G She insisted on her innocence
- H It is a long narrow valley with high mountains towering over the villages
- I a local journalist began to go over the records
- K something which wasn't lost on her employer
